What is Sketchnoting?

Is a form of note taking where visual elements are used to express and relate main concepts and ideas. Sketchnoting creates a flow that focuses on listening, synthesizing and transferring what you hear. Sketchnoting uses both visual elements and hand-writing to convey concepts.

Listening and drawing writes ideas on our brains twice - this is called Dual-Coding. This embeds the ideas in our brain deeper.

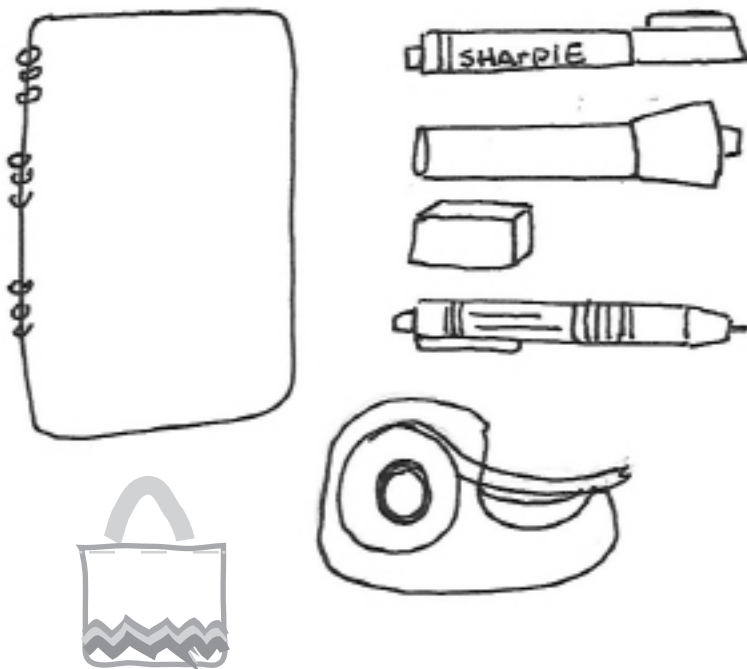

The process of drawing helps us comprehend what we're hearing.

We retain information longer.
We recall information faster.

The process is way more fun.

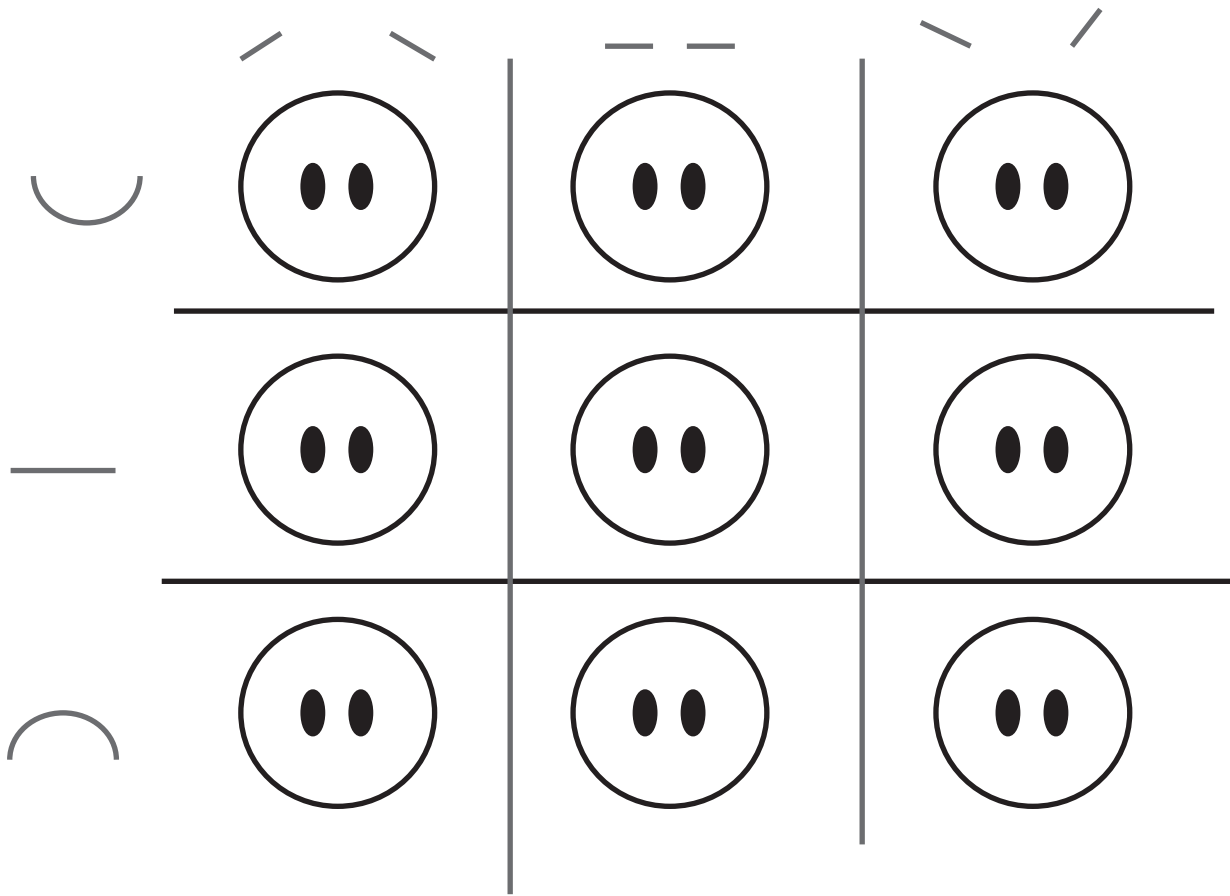

The results are much more interesting.
